BECKY IS OVER BACK PAIN AND UNDER PAR

Pain in Andover resident Becky Crow's back, legs and hip took her out of the game. Her spine was unstable, she had a severely herniated disk and required surgery. Becky chose the comprehensive spine care team at Lawrence General Hospital and after a successful recovery, has found her way back to the first of many tees to come.

Is back or neck pain keeping you from your life?
Take our free online self-assessment to see if you should visit a Lawrence General Spine Specialist. Visit lawrencegeneral.org/spine to learn more.

The Trails of Andover

BY TOM DRAHEIM

Besides being fun, free, healthy and open 365 days a year, Andover's 75 miles of trails on 4,000 acres of conservation land—a hiker's and biker's dream—might be the secret ingredient to Andover's quality of life. The school system may have brought many of us to town, but it's the green space that keeps us here.

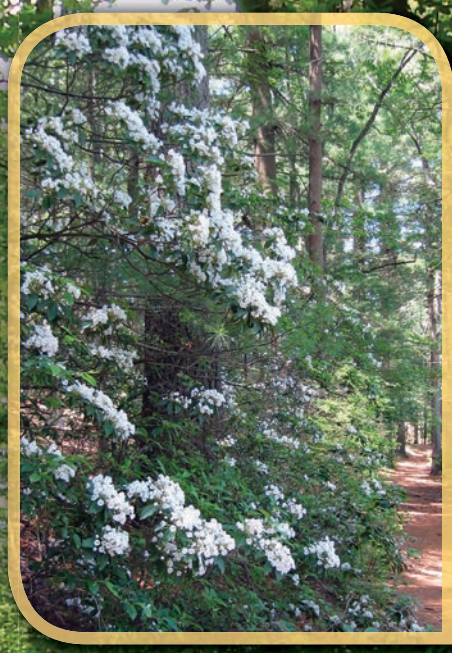
On a sunny, crisp morning last fall, The Andover Guide met with Alan French, long-time Andover resident, former owner of Moor & Mountain outfitters, and enthusiastic advocate for community trails. We had rendezvoused at a trailhead on the west side of town and like a field general Alan spread maps across the hood of his car and called us in "for a briefing." We started with some history.

The Bay Circuit Trail runs over 200 miles through eastern Massachusetts, crossing 35 of a 57-town corridor from Ipswich to Duxbury. The Andover portion, 16 miles, is the longest stretch of any town. "It's one of the oldest experiments in land planning, going back to 1929, and the backbone to the network of community trails today," said Alan.

The Bay Circuit is the brainchild of legendary Boston conservationists Charles Eliot and Benton MacKaye (MacKaye was a visionary for the Appalachian Trail). Alan French led a grassroots coalition, the Bay Circuit Alliance, which since 1992 has developed the Bay Circuit Trail into its current shape. As Alan showed us some interesting trails around town, he reminisced about the past.

A self-described "fugitive from corporate finance," Alan moved to Andover from New York in 1963. He co-founded Moor and Mountain outfitters, a famous Andover spot for many years, and retired from the business in 2012. "In the cycle of life, it was time." He's most proud of being a life-long "activist for grass roots action on the environment in Andover," involved in everything from writing grant requests to laying boardwalk. "But how do you retire from a life-long passion?"

One of the newest jewels in the Andover trail system is a 700-foot long section of boardwalk through a red maple swamp off High Plain Road. It's like walking into another world. The elevated boardwalk gets you up off the wetlands floor where you can appreciate the lush ferns and tall stands of pine. It keeps Bay Circuit hikers off the busy street for a stretch and allows them to use resources they couldn't before.



"Close-to-home walking, biking and paddling are some of Andover's biggest assets," according to the Andover Trails Committee, "and we want to make it as easy as walking out your front door."

This is the main message of Alan French and the Andover Trails Committee: people get out and use these resources! "If people use it, they don't mind paying to preserve it," said Alan. "Some conservationists are overzealous and don't like people to use wetlands, they think it's intrusive. I think getting people to use and love wetlands is the best protection for wetlands. Building a boardwalk is an intrusion, but a damn good one," he added.

We discovered another hidden gem, the Pray Meadow, off the popular Haggetts Pond Rail Trail. Walk a few hundred yards down the main trail, cross a relatively new bridge to the left, and pick up the Pray Field Trail. It winds through the woods to a beautiful open meadow, dotted with a couple of trees. The Andover Trails Committee keeps the meadow mowed for the town, perfect for picnics and softball games.

Whether it's hiking, biking, paddling, skiing or snowshoeing, get moving on the trails of Andover. For more information, contact the Andover Trails Committee at andovertrails.org and the Andover Village Improvement Society at avisandover.org. Together they publish the very handy Andover Trails Guide, available around town.
